

Katie Stevens

Executive Director, Laser Spine Institute Cincinnati

Experience

As a former NCAA assistant basketball coach, Katie Stevens knows what it takes to lead a winning team. For her, leadership is about personal connections — both with her staff and the patients she encounters. With a mix of compassion, unflappable positivity and a healthy dose of fun, Katie is always working in service to the larger mission of providing exceptional patient care.

At our state-of-the-art center in Cincinnati, Katie oversees all medical and business operations for the facility in her role as Executive Director. Her leadership style is built on empowering teammates and fostering a collaborative environment. Katie believes that investing time in a happy, productive staff is essential to making Laser Spine Institute a place where people find healing and a better quality of life.

Katie came to Laser Spine Institute as an Associate Administrator after earning her Master of Science degree in health services management from Elmira College. She quickly rose to the level of Interim, and eventually, Associate Executive Director at our Cleveland center before transitioning to her current position in Cincinnati. Katie is also an active member of the American College of Healthcare Executives and the Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky Chamber of Commerce.

Prior to joining Laser Spine Institute, Katie was the recruiting coordinator and assistant women's basketball coach at her alma mater, Elmira College. There, she guided prospective student-athletes through the recruiting and admissions process while assisting the current team both on and off the court. She's also committed to community service and has helped with the Southside Girls and Boys Basketball Clinic, among other endeavors.

Katie loves good food just as much as she does staying active. So when she's not leading the team at Laser Spine Institute Cincinnati, you can find her exploring new restaurants, boxing and playing basketball.
